

Playtower Thing 3

momoll, 2006

A multifunctional playtower (modern glass house) with a facade made of plexiglass panels or silkscreened sliding walls. Originally developed as a contemporary modern dollhouse, this expandable play tower can grow with the child's imagination. Make it a garage, a hospital, a shelf or worktable/station.

Convincing in its simplicity, this tower can be expanded in height [almost] without limit. The modern, modular design is easily assembled (and disassembled), solid and well-crafted.

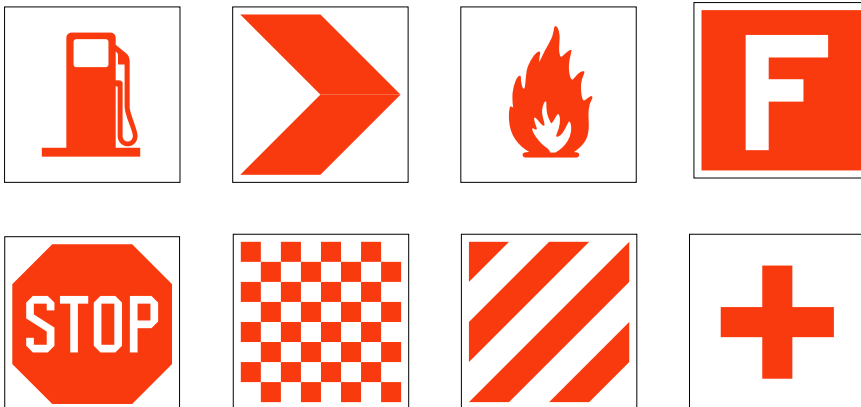

Materials: multilayer birch plywood, water-based finish; plexiglas tinted, silkscreened plywood; different themes
 EN 71 Norm for toys
